FOR RELEASE: SEPTEMBER 1954

The nation's first Jewish sponsored liberal arts college for women will open Tuesday, September 14th, with a pilot class of fifty drawn from seven states, it was announced today by Dr. Samuel Belkin, president of Yeshiva University.

Stern College for Women, which becomes the twelfth division of Yeshiva University, America's first university under Jewish auspices, is housed in the former Packard Junior College building on the southeast corner of Lexington Avenue and 35th Street (253 Lexington Avenue).

The establishment of the school was made possible through an initial gift of $500,000 from Max Stern, president of Hartz Mountain Products and prominent New York City communal leader.

Although the school has been literally inundated with applications, it was resolved to insure the successful development of the school's program and philosophy, Dr. Belkin explained. The incoming class includes students from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Michigan, Florida and Pennsylvania.

With 25 classrooms, students' lounges, an auditorium, and other school facilities, the property is at present ideally suited for the operation of a college, Dr. Belkin declared. However, renovations are being made to construct chemistry, biology, and physics laboratories for programs in the sciences and to meet an eventual enrollment of 500.

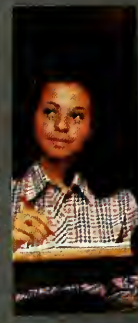

FOR RELEASE: SEPTEMBER 1979

After twenty-five years Stern College has earned an enviable reputation in its educational programs, services and extra-curricular activities designed to meet the needs of the students enrolled in its dual program.

Presently, Stern College offers a variety of programs leading to degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, and Bachelor of Education. In addition, as part of a Bachelor of Science program, a student can spend the first two years at Beth Israel Medical Center, in order to become a registered nurse, and the remaining two years at Stern College. It is also possible for a student to arrange a major—from advertising to physical education. She may design her major to suit her own interests.

Stern College for Women has vindicated the vision of its founding fathers and remains a growing, ever-developing institution for Jewish and secular education.

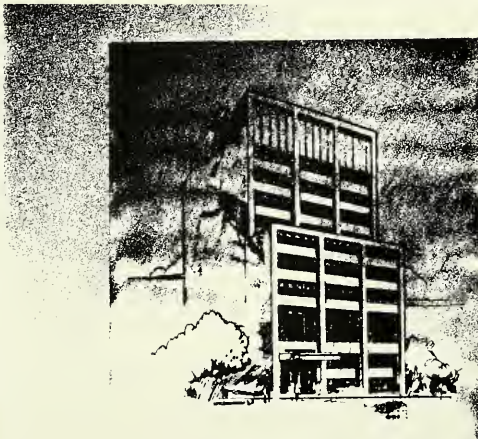

This year marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of Stern College. With this in mind, the graduates would be honored to dedicate this yearbook to the founder of our institution, Mr. Max Stern.

Mr. Stern's gift was made in memory of his parents, Emanuel and Caroline Stern, to advance Jewish American higher education.

We, the graduates, would like to express our gratitude and admiration at this time to Mr. Max Stern for making this all possible.

With Our Fondest Wishes,
Graduating Class of 1980

MESSAGE FOR KOCHAVIAH 1980
FROM MR. MAX STERN

It is with great pleasure that I extend warmest greetings to the 1980 graduates of Stern College for Women. I am deeply honored that the yearbook staff has chosen to dedicate this Kochavish to me.

Graduating during the 25th anniversary year of the College, you have participated constructively in the continued development of alma mater. As new opportunities in law, medicine, the physical sciences and other fields open to today's woman college graduate, she can play an increasingly vital role in the general community and experience ever greater personal fulfillment. Stern College has contributed immeasurably to your growth whatever your career goals.

In addition to the knowledge acquired in liberal arts study, the College has offered you a unique opportunity for spiritual development. Here the rich treasures of Judaism and the arts and sciences of Western civilization are perpetuated in one program. Stern College concentrates on the moral purposes of human knowledge while researching the mysteries of the universe, seeking a better understanding of the world in which we have been placed, attempting to achieve a greater appreciation of the lives and destinies of the people among whom we live.

In your various roles in the professions, and as guardians of our Torah traditions in the home and community, you will find the years spent at Stern College taking on ever greater significance. I have abiding faith that you will utilize your education for continued growth and service, and extend my very best wishes for the future.

Sincerely,

Max Stern

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

September 19, 1979

To the Class of 1980:

You have the special privilege of graduating from Stern College for Women during its most significant anniversary in its young life: its 25th anniversary.

As I write these words, it occurs to me that you are all younger than the school itself and therefore can hardly be expected to appreciate the novelty that it represents and the imagination and creativity that went into its founding. Stern is a school that ought not to be taken for granted and its singular contribution should not be underestimated.

You now take your places in the ranks of its alumnae armed, I trust, with that special loyalty to the school and commitment to its values that derives from the special character of this year's celebration.

May you achieve success in all your undertakings, and bring glory to your alma mater, to Torah, to Israel, and to our country.

Cordially yours,

NORMAN LAMM
President

STERN COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

OFFICE OF THE DEAN

YESHIVA UNIVERSITY

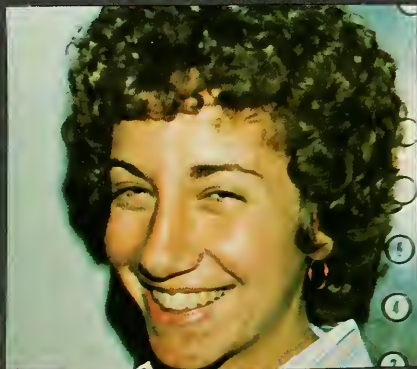

I am very happy to extend my best wishes to you, the class of 1980, and to join with you in a celebration of the 25th Anniversary of Stern College for Women. A celebration it truly is, for we can all be justly proud of the pioneering distance this college has covered in its first quarter century.

In many ways your experiences at Stern College have been different, your studies more demanding and innovative, than those of the graduates of the 50's, 60's and 70's whom you now join as fellow alumnae. Yet despite these differences, there are some fundamental values that bind us together. Many of these values I clearly associate with the unique individual who has been the inspiration for Stern College and its benefactor these many years, Mr. Max Stern. These values—extraordinary dignity, service to one's people and community, love of learning and culture, commitment to quality—represent the common denominator of our varied experiences and our guidelines for the future.

May you go from strength to strength in all your undertakings.

Dear Classmates,

Working on this yearbook shook me out of a slumber I had been in for my few years here. The more I got involved, the more I found myself caring about it all. Just as I was preparing to wrap up four years of indifference, I got stuck caring. A difficult emotion for one who is used to playing an observatory role.

Thank you for exposing me to it.

Love,
Ruthie

The students of Stern College take pride in the depth and warmth of their relationship with the faculty. It was not an overnight phenomena. The feeling which was engendered between faculty and students justified all the time and effort expended in achieving it.

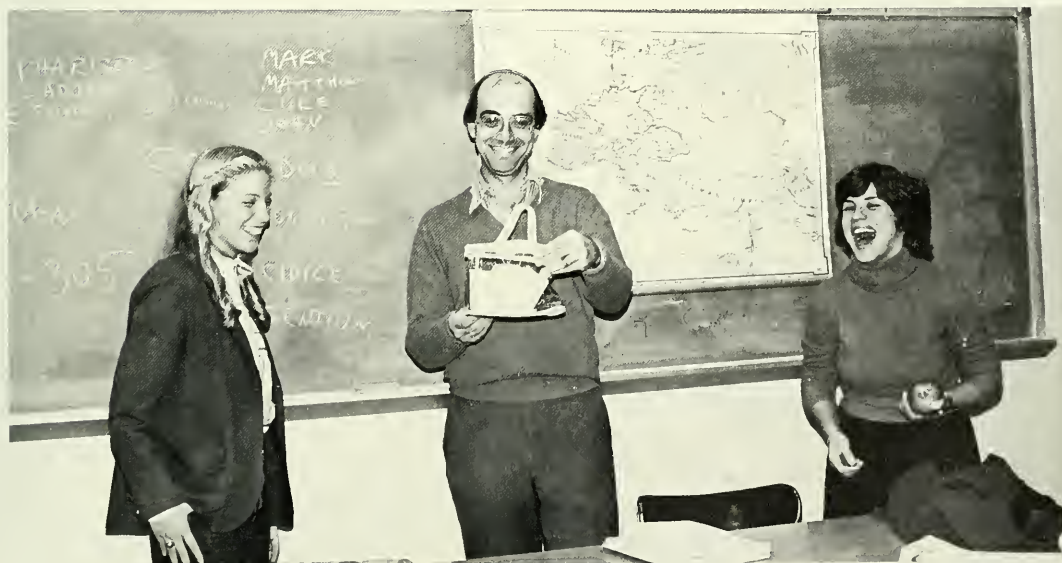

It was a two-way street. Teachers invited students to their homes and had them meet and associate with their families. Students who lived in the same communities with teachers, commuted together, ate together, and discussed personal, family matters.

We seniors of Stern College are grateful for the four years of friendship we have enjoyed with our teachers and shall always treasure the memory of their graciousness.

"Grown ups love figures. When you tell them that you have made a new friend they never ask you any questions about essential matters. They never ask you 'what does his voice sound like? What games does he love best? Does he collect butterflies?' Instead, they demand: 'How old is he? How many brothers has he? How much does he weigh? How much money does his father make?'—Only from figures do they think they have learned anything about him."

STUDENT COUNCIL

"The office of government is not to confer happiness, but to give men opportunity to work out happiness for themselves."

Being an officer of the executive board of Student Council, this sentiment can be easily understood. Student Council gives the women of Stern College such an opportunity; the opportunity to join as a cooperative community, rich in resources that will lead to success and the attainment of goals.

Taking advantage of this opportunity through Student Council and its clubs, as a united student body, will ultimately result in the working out of a common happiness. A happiness that will accompany the students throughout their college years and hopefully, future years as well.

SPORTS FIGURES

The word athletics was almost invisible in the Stern College curriculum until 1978, when the first intramural basketball game was played. With the advice of the Director of Athletics, Professor Tauber, Stern College's first physical education major, Sharon Markowitz, helped the program expand into basketball, tennis, volleyball, fencing and bowling.

In the following year, 1979, a more challenging idea was proposed by Professor Tauber, it was to have a varsity team in basketball and tennis. Both varsity teams played against Pratt Institute in Brooklyn. Over one hundred fans came to view the momentous basketball game on March 11, 1979. The final Score of the game was 40-21, not a bad showing for the first time around. On April 25th, Yeshiva College and Stern College played Pratt Institute in tennis. Although we both were defeated, it will inspire us to continue this program for years to come.

This year, due to the efforts of Dean Bacon and Professor Tauber, and with Yeshiva University's recognition of Title 1 (equal opportunity for women in sports), we were able to acquire funds for the basketball team. With twelve players and a rented gym, the team is ready for business.

As we approach Stern College for Women's silver anniversary, we have come a long way as far as athletics are concerned.

Sharon Markowitz and Professor Tauber

Stern College—Adieu

Years have come and passed away
And time has taken its fill
Yet the memory of each bustling day
Will remain with us still

Teachers, deans, friends we made
Lessons we learned, things we have seen
During our four years, each its part has played
To elevate our sights and make our vision keen

"Torah U Mada" was not just a phrase
Nor "chesed" a word of limited meaning
For us, they are a way of life to fill our days
With getting, while we are giving

So Hail, dear College
We salute you!
You have filled our hearts with love—
our minds with knowledge
Farewell, dear school, your daughters, shall miss you.

These words barely describe the Deana We all love and care for. Her concern for children has led her to get a masters in history so that she can instill in them the values of our culture. Deana is not one for surface relationships. It has always been important to her to establish a deep bond between herself and her friends. She is one that always has time for others. Her open mind enables her to deal on an equal level with everyone. Her growth has been also the growth of our family. Deana's devotion to the family has strengthened us. Her years at Stern College have firmly established her Jewish beliefs and her love for Judaism. It is not enough to say we love her for our feelings for her go beyond that. How can we express the joy all of us are feeling at the culmination of her college years, and the beginning of the rest of her life? Certainly not with mere words. We hope our future actions toward her will express all our feelings of joy and pride. Congratulations to Deana and the best of luck on all your future endeavors.
